

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT SEATTLE

FATIMA ALI,

Plaintiff,

V.

MICHAEL MUKASEY, et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. C07-591MJP

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND COSTS

This matter comes before the Court on Plaintiff's motion for attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to the Equal Access to Justice Act ("EAJA"), 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d). (Dkt. No. 12.) After reviewing the moving papers, Defendants' response (Dkt. No. 16), Plaintiff's reply (Dkt. No. 17), and all papers submitted in support thereof, the Court GRANTS Plaintiff's motion. The Court's reasoning is set forth below.

Background

Plaintiff Fatima Ali, an Iraqi refugee, has been a legal permanent resident of the United States since 2000. Ms. Ali filed an application for naturalization with the United States Citizenship & Immigration Service (“USCIS”) on October 13, 2005. USCIS interviewed Ms. Ali on April 5, 2006 when it approved her disability-based waiver for the English literacy and civics examination and told her that she met the residence and good moral character requirements for naturalization. Although USCIS had obtained a complete criminal background check on Ms. Ali before the interview, it delayed adjudicating her naturalization application because the FBI “name check” had not been completed. By February 2007, USCIS had still failed to process Ms. Ali’s application.

ORDER — 1

1 Ms. Ali's claims were presented with fourteen other plaintiffs in an amended Complaint
2 for Naturalization, Declaratory Relief and Mandamus filed by Hassan Shamdeen, Case No. C07-3 164MJP, pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1447(b). The Amended Complaint requested the following 4 relief:

5 Plaintiffs request that the Court grant their naturalization applications, give them 6 their oaths of citizenship and order Defendant CIS to prepare and provide 7 certificates of naturalization. In the alternative, Plaintiffs request that the Court remand the cases to CIS with instructions that the applications be adjudicated within 30 days of the order.

8 (Dkt. No. 1 at 3.) In a later section of the complaint entitled "Request for Relief," Plaintiffs 9 ask the Court to:

10 Grant the applications of plaintiffs, and give the plaintiffs their oath of 11 citizenship, or, in the alternative, order Defendant CIS to administer oaths of citizenship to plaintiffs within 10 days of the order.

12 (Dkt. No. 1 at 15.) On Defendants' motion, the Court issued an order severing the claims of 13 the plaintiffs on April 23, 2007 and created fifteen discrete cases.

14 Ms. Ali was assigned Case No. C07-591MJP. On April 25, 2007, the Court ordered 15 Defendants to show cause why the Court should not grant Ms. Ali's application for 16 naturalization. (Dkt. No. 2.) Defendants responded to the order with a motion to dismiss 17 and/or remand (Dkt. No. 4), which the Court denied on August 6, 2007 (Dkt. No. 8). After 18 an evidentiary hearing held on September 13, 2007, the Court found that Ms. Ali had met her 19 burden of proving that she was eligible for citizenship "[b]ecause Ms. Ali has offered proof of 20 her eligibility for citizenship, and because the Government has failed to offer any evidence 21 contradicting that eligibility[.]" (Dkt. No. 12 at 3.) The Court then remanded Ms. Ali's case 22 to USCIS and instructed Defendants to issue a decision on Ms. Ali's application by September 23 18, 2007. (Dkt. No. 12.) Ms. Ali was naturalized on September 18, 2007 and the Court 24 dismissed her case on September 20, 2007. Plaintiff now brings this motion for attorneys' 25 fees and costs pursuant to the EAJA.

ORDER — 2

Jurisdiction

The Court has jurisdiction over Ms. Ali's action pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1447(b), which states:

If there is a failure to make a determination under section 1446 of this title before the end of the 120-day period after the date on which the examination is conducted under such section, the applicant may apply to the United States district court for the district in which the applicant resides for a hearing on the matter. Such court has jurisdiction over the matter and may either determine the matter or remand the matter, with appropriate instructions, to the [USCIS] to determine the matter.

8 Under this authority, the Court has jurisdiction over this matter if USCIS has not made a 9 naturalization determination within 120 days of “the examination.” The Court followed the 10 majority of district court decisions on the issue in concluding that the word “examination” 11 refers to the date of the examination interview with a USCIS officer, and not the entire 12 examination process. (Dkt. No. 11.) Ms. Ali’s interview took place on April 5, 2006 and 13 USCIS had failed to act on her application almost ten months later when she brought this 14 action.

Analysis

16 Under the EAJA, a litigant who has brought a civil suit against the United States is 17 entitled to attorney's fees and costs if: (1) she is the prevailing party in the matter; (2) the 18 government fails to show that its position was substantially justified or that special 19 circumstances make an award unjust; and (3) the requested fees and costs are reasonable. 28 20 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(1)(A). Additionally, the application for fees must be filed within 30 days of 21 a final judgment. Defendants do not challenge Plaintiff's motion as untimely.

I. Prevailing Party

23 The Ninth Circuit has identified two factors that define “prevailing party” under the 24 EAJA. Carbonell v. INS, 429 F.3d 894 (9th Cir. 2005). Plaintiff’s action must have resulted 25 in: (1) a material alteration in the parties’ legal relationship; and (2) that alteration must have 26 been judicially sanctioned. Id. at 898.

1        “A party need not succeed on every claim in order to prevail. Rather, a plaintiff 2 prevails if she has succeeded on any significant issue in litigation which achieved some of the 3 benefit she sought in bringing suit.” Id. at 901 n.5 (internal citations and quotation marks 4 omitted). Ms. Ali sought two alternative forms of relief in her complaint: (1) that the Court 5 grant her naturalization application; or (2) that the Court order USCIS to adjudicate her 6 application and administer an oath of citizenship. In remanding the case to USCIS, the Court 7 found that Ms. Ali had made a prima facie showing of eligibility for citizenship and ordered 8 USCIS to naturalize her or show cause why the Court should not. Ms. Ali achieved a 9 material alteration in her legal relationship with Defendants when her application was finally 10 adjudicated.

11       The material alteration in the relationship between the parties must also be stamped 12 with some “judicial imprimatur.” Carbonell, 429 F.3d at 901. Relief achieved through a 13 voluntary change that was simply prompted by the lawsuit does not convey prevailing party 14 status on the plaintiff. See Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home v. W. Va. Dep’t of Health & 15 Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 605 (2001) (rejecting the “catalyst theory” on the ground that it 16 lacks the critical factor of “judicial sanction”).

17       USCIS did not voluntarily naturalize Ms. Ali but was compelled to do so by the Court.
18 When Ms. Ali brought this action under § 1447(b), the Court assumed exclusive jurisdiction 19 and had two options for disposition of the matter: (1) to determine the matter on the merits; 20 or (2) to “remand the matter, with appropriate instructions, to [USCIS] to determine the 21 matter.” United States v. Hovsepian, 359 F.3d 1144, 1161 (9th Cir. 2004); 8 U.S.C. § 22 1447(b). On September 14, 2007, the Court remanded Ms. Ali’s case to USCIS with explicit 23 instructions to adjudicate the application and reserved the right to re-establish jurisdiction if 24 Defendants failed to comply with its order:

25       The Court is not interested in naturalizing anyone who should not be naturalized.
26 But the Court is interested in forcing the agency to perform and carry out its 27 statutory duty. If the Government does not naturalize Ms. Ali on September 18th, then the Government must appear before this Court on September 19 at 9:00

1 a.m., and explain exactly why Ms. Ali does not meet the citizenship criteria. The 2 Court will administer the naturalization oath to Ms. Ali on September 19, unless 3 the Government can articulate a good reason at the hearing why it should not do 4 so.

5 (Dkt. No. 12 at 4) (emphasis in original). USCIS acted on Ms. Ali's application at the 6 direction of the Court and would have violated a court order if it had not.

7 Further, Ms. Ali's success on the merits does not rely solely on the fact that USCIS 8 ultimately granted her application for naturalization; instead, her success stems from the fact 9 that USCIS adjudicated her naturalization application at all. Section 1447(b) is "a statutory 10 check on what could otherwise amount to an infinite amount of time available to the 11 government in which to render a decision on the application[.]" Alghamdi v. Ridge, No.
 12 3:05cv344-RS, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68498, *13 (N.D. Fla. Sep. 25, 2006). The Ninth 13 Circuit has found that "[a] central purpose of [§ 1447(b)] was to reduce the waiting time for 14 naturalization applicants." Hovsepian, 359 F.3d at 1163 (citing H.R. Rep. No. 101-187, at 8 15 (1989); 135 Cong. Rec. H4539-02, H4542 (1989) (statement of Rep. Morrison)). Ms. Ali's 16 action put an end to the delay in processing her application and forced USCIS to make a 17 determination on her immigration status. USCIS's discretion in deciding whether to grant or 18 deny Ms. Ali's application does not transform the adjudication of that application into a 19 voluntary act. See Alghamdi, U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68498, *17 ("Whether USCIS ultimately 20 grants or denies the application are [sic] irrelevant for determining whether a plaintiff has 21 succeeded on the merits of an action based on § 1447(b). The sole purpose of § 1447(b) is to 22 provide the applicant with a decision on the application where a decision has been withheld for 23 an unreasonable amount of time.").

24 II. Substantially Justified

25 A litigant may not recover fees under the EAJA if the government shows that its 26 litigating position and "the action or failure to act by the agency upon which the civil action is 27 based" were substantially justified or that special circumstances make an award unjust. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d). "Congress enacted the EAJA to ensure that individuals and organizations

1 would not be deterred by the expense of unjustified governmental opposition from vindicating 2 their fundamental rights in civil actions and in administrative proceedings.” Abela v.
 3 Gustafson, 888 F.2d 1258, 1262 (9th Cir. 1989) (emphasis added).

4       First, Ms. Ali brought this action because USCIS had failed to adjudicate her 5 naturalization petition even though she had completed her citizenship interview almost ten 6 months earlier. There is no statutory time limit for the adjudication of naturalization 7 applications, but government agencies are required to conclude matters presented to them 8 within a “reasonable time.” See 5 U.S.C. § 555(b). Further, 8 C.F.R. 335.3(a) states that 9 “[a] decision to grant or deny the application shall be made at the time of the initial 10 examination or within 120-days after the date of the initial examination of the applicant for 11 naturalization[.]” While Defendants argued that they could not adjudicate the application until 12 Ms. Ali’s name check was complete, they failed to explain why the name check was delayed.
 13 In a similar case, the Northern District of Florida found that the explanation “that background 14 checks were necessary and had to be completed before the plaintiff could be naturalized...
 15 merely restates, in a conclusory manner, the necessity of completing the background check; it 16 does not justify the delay.” Alghamdi, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68498 at *43 (emphasis in 17 original).

18       Second, the government’s litigation position rests on three arguments: (1) lack of 19 subject matter jurisdiction; (2) the appropriateness of remand because USCIS is better 20 equipped to adjudicate a naturalization petition; and (3) the necessity of remand to USCIS to 21 await the results of Ms. Ali’s statutorily required name check. To find that the government’s 22 litigation position was substantially justified, the Court must determine that the arguments had 23 “a reasonable basis in law and fact.” Abela, 888 F.2d at 1264.

24       The Court finds that Defendants’ first two arguments were substantially justified. A 25 minority of courts had held that district court review is triggered only after the FBI name 26 check is complete. See Danilov v. Aguirre, 370 F.Supp.2d 441, 443-44 (E.D. Va. 2005).
 27 Although Defendants knew that this Court had asserted subject matter jurisdiction over similar
 ORDER — 6

1 actions, their position against jurisdiction had a reasonable basis in law. Likewise, 2 Defendants' argument that USCIS is better equipped to assess the merits of a naturalization 3 application is reasonable.

4       However, Defendants point out that, "when analyzing whether the Government was 5 substantially justified in a particular case, courts should consider the Government's litigating 6 position as a whole." (Response at 6) (citing Comm'r v. Jean, 496 U.S. 154, 161-162 (1990)
 7 ("While the parties' postures on individual matters may be more or less justified, the EAJA – 8 like other fee-shifting statutes – favors treating a case as an inclusive whole, rather than as 9 atomized line-items.")). A careful reading of Defendants' pleadings reveals their primary 10 argument: because Congress requires that an FBI name check be conducted on naturalization 11 applicants, Ms. Ali's application should not be adjudicated, by the Court or by USCIS, until 12 the check is completed.<sup>1</sup> As explained above, this argument provides no justification for the 13 delay itself. See Alghamdi, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68498 at *43. The Alghamdi court 14 reasoned:

15       [W]hile a reasonable person would not dispute the necessity of conducting 16 a background check on an applicant for naturalization, a reasonable person 17 would require a satisfactory justification for a substantial delay in 18 completing the background check. Indeed, government agencies are 19 required to conclude matters presented to them within a "reasonable time."
 20 See 5 U.S.C. § 555(b). Otherwise, an applicant for naturalization remains 21 in perpetual limbo and is by de facto, denied his citizenship, a right that has 22 been afforded by Congress to deserving individuals since the rise of the 23 American democracy. This is particularly true when Congress has enacted 24 legislation permitting the applicant to apply to federal district court if a 25 decision is not rendered on the application with 120 days of the completion 26 of the examination under 8 U.S.C. § 1447(b).

27 Alghamdi, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68498 at *42-43 (emphasis in original). As in Alghamdi, 24       <sup>1</sup>Defendants offer the clearest description of their argument with the following language: "In summary, 25 Plaintiff would like to circumvent key aspects of the naturalization process and obtain citizenship without a complete 26 assessment of her moral character. She is, in essence, asking this Court to assume that there is nothing in her 27 background that would preclude her from obtaining citizenship. However, USCIS cannot adjudicate a naturalization application absent a completed background investigation. Consequently, the Court should not adjudicate an application without such information. Should this Court decide to assume jurisdiction over Plaintiff's citizenship application, the Government respectfully requests that this case be remanded to USCIS to await her security check results and, thereafter, to promptly adjudicate her application." (Dkt. No. 4 at 9.)

1 Defendants have made no attempt to justify the delay in processing Ms. Ali's name check, and 2 this Court cannot assume that "national security" requires such delay. Instead, making 3 responsible United States citizens of those who seek naturalization appears to be the most 4 reasonable way of ensuring our country's security.

5 Defendants' reliance on Deng v. Chertoff is misplaced. Unlike this Court's remand 6 order, which required immediate adjudication of Ms. Ali's application, the Deng court 7 remanded petitioner's application to USCIS with instructions to adjudicate petitioner's 8 application "as soon as possible after receiving the FBI name check results." Deng v.
9 Chertoff, No. C 06-7697 SI, 2007 WL 2600732, *1 (N.D.Cal. Sept. 10, 2007). Without 10 some justification for the delayed name check, this Court cannot find that USCIS's delay in 11 processing Ms. Ali's naturalization applications was substantially justified. Neither does the 12 Court find that any special circumstances make the awarding of fees unjust.

13 III. Reasonable Fees and Costs

14 Plaintiff is entitled to a "reasonable" amount of fees. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b). The EAJA 15 includes a statutory cap for attorneys' fees, unless a special factor justifies a higher rate. 28 16 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(2)(A). Because Ms. Ali's attorney needed specialized immigration law 17 skills to file the original complaint of fifteen plaintiffs, her efforts in originating the action 18 justify a higher market rate. See Pirus v. Bowen, 869 F.2d 536, 540-541 (9th Cir. 1989).
19 However, Defendants greatly multiplied the work on these cases by moving to sever the 20 action into fifteen distinct cases. Because much of the work required in this matter was 21 duplicated for the multiple plaintiffs, the Court finds it reasonable to award the statutory rate 22 of fees to any hours spent modifying work product for related cases. Hours billed by other 23 members of Plaintiff's legal team are to be compensated at the statutory rate. Further, Plaintiff 24 is entitled to reasonable costs. Because the Court acknowledge's Plaintiff's attorney's 25 immigration law expertise, the Court disallows any consultation fee by an outside immigration 26 expert.

27 ORDER — 8

Conclusion

Plaintiff is entitled to attorneys' fees at market rate for time spent on any original work in preparing this action, and attorneys' fees at the statutory rate for time spent modifying original work for this action once the fifteen plaintiffs in the original complaint were severed into discrete cases. Plaintiff is also awarded reasonable costs.

The parties are directed to submit a joint proposed order regarding costs and fees that accords with the Court's instructions and contains documentation of costs and time billed. The proposed order shall be submitted to the Court within twenty days of this order.

The Chakrabarti and Bhattacharya (1999) model is also called the standard model.

The Clerk is directed to send a copy of the order to all counsel of record.
